

Abstract

The present invention is directed to a guard for a power tool with a rotatably driven insertion tool (14), with which at least portions of the insertion tool (14) can be covered.

According to the present invention, at least one blocking means (32, 40) is provided that at least prevents the insertion tool (14) from turning around an axis of rotation (18).

(Figure 5)